

Class description

The GRE, SAT and PAEP are similar to the GMAT in that they are entry exams to study at undergraduate or postgraduate level.

GRE – Very similar in structure and content to the GMAT, and is used as a criterion for admission into a wide range of graduate programs (masters), normally when the GMAT is not required, for example in fields such as social sciences, biology, etc.

SAT – Similar in structure and content to the GMAT, and is used as a criterion for admission into a wide range of undergraduate programs

PAEP – The Spanish-language equivalent of the GMAT, used as a criterion for admission into a wide range of graduate programs (masters) for Spanish-speaking institutions, for example it is required by ORT for their MAB program.

This document covers the exams themselves. Other areas of a masters or undergraduate application are also supported by Eureka:

- General advice – where to study, how to research, etc.
- English assessment exams –specifically TOEFL iBT and IELTS
- Application advice and correction – including statements of purpose, references, essays, etc.
- Interview coaching – to maximise the chance of an offer
- Scholarship applications – to help strengthen the application

Who is the course for?

Anyone interested in studying in an English- or Spanish-speaking country at undergraduate or postgraduate level, where the GMAT is not accepted.
